FAREWELL MESSAGE AND THE ROAD AHEAD

This is the sixth and final Annual Report that I am submitting to the Speaker of the Senate in accordance with the provisions of the Parliament of Canada Act. The report covers the period from April 1, 2010 to March 31, 2011.

As honourable senators know by now, on January 27, 2011, I wrote to the Speaker of the Senate, the Honourable Noël Kinsella, to inform him that I will be leaving my position as Senate Ethics Officer, effective May 2011, having completed six years of a seven-year term.<sup>1</sup>

It has been a great honour for me to be appointed as the first Senate Ethics Officer and a rare privilege to serve as an independent Officer of the Senate, a journey which began when I was approached at the end of 2004 by the Honourable Senator Jack Austin, the then Leader of the Government in the Senate, and by the Honourable Noël Kinsella, the then Leader of the Opposition in the Senate, asking whether I would be interested in being considered for the position of Senate Ethics Officer.

On February 22, 2005, Senator Austin joined with Senator Kinsella to move a motion in the Senate for the approval of my appointment. On February 24, 2005, I appeared before the Senate sitting in Committee of the Whole and, that same day, the motion was adopted. The following day, the Governor in Council appointed me as Senate Ethics Officer for a seven-year term effective April 1, 2005.

While I am, of course, looking forward to the next chapter of my life, and spending more time with my family, friends, and the occasional good book, fishing rod or golf clubs, I will greatly miss working with senators, the members of my small and highly dedicated staff as well as the first-rate working environment that the Senate provides.

I want to express my deep appreciation to all senators, past and present, for their support during my term in office. I trust that the work of the Office has been helpful to them as they seek to remain in compliance with the requirements of the Conflict of Interest Code for Senators. I will do my utmost to be of assistance to them until my departure.

These past six years have been a rewarding time for me and I have learned a great deal. Very few people have the opportunity to get to know and engage with individual senators and the Senate as an institution, in the environment in which I have been privileged to serve. After several hundred face-to-face meetings with senators, it has been my experience that they strive to make every effort to conduct themselves to the highest ethical standard. Senators are honourable, honest and well-intentioned people who have entered public life to serve their fellow Canadians, and who would not knowingly conduct themselves in a manner that would contravene the Code. I have been impressed with the range of knowledge senators continually demonstrate, the enthusiasm they bring to their work, their commitment to public service, and their dedication to identifying ways to improve legislation, regulations, and government programs and services.

I owe an immense debt of gratitude to my loyal and hardworking staff that has been with me since the beginning in 2005. Any achievements of this office are a reflection of their commitment and enthusiasm, and I have been the beneficiary of their successes. The Office has remained small – both in terms of the number of staff and budget – due in no small measure to putting in place an electronic information management system to manage, track and report on the many requests for opinions and advice we receive, as well as other communications with senators and their staff.

We have endeavoured to operate efficiently through cost-recovery arrangements with the Senate Administration in the areas of security, finance, human resources and information technology. I wish to extend my appreciation to the Clerk of the Senate, to his staff and to the members of the Standing Committee on Internal Economy, Budgets and Administration who made these arrangements possible. For reasons of transparency and accountability, we have always provided for the financial statements of the Office to be audited by an external auditor and the results are tabled in the Senate as part of the Annual Report.

To my counterparts, parliamentary ethics commissioners across the country, thank you for sharing your experience and for your wise counsel. I found the opportunity to exchange views from time to time with colleagues in other jurisdictions, through the Canadian Conflict of Interest Network (CCOIN), to be invaluable. I will miss the annual meetings and their friendship.

I request that all senators extend to my successor the same courtesy and cooperation they have provided to me. I wish my successor the very best in what is a challenging and rewarding position – one of the most fascinating I have held during my forty-five years of public service with the Government of Canada.

The Road Ahead

While the Senate should be very proud of what the Ethics Office has accomplished over the first phase of its development, it would be regrettable to maintain the status quo. It is not advisable to assume that everything that needed to be done in terms of constructing an ethical framework for senators has been accomplished. Perhaps the strongest lesson I have learned in my interactions with colleagues, both at home and internationally, is that parliamentary codes or rules of conduct cannot remain static in a dynamic environment. They are living documents, works in progress. Over time, changes become necessary as the public demands higher standards of ethics, transparency and accountability and operational experience reveals where improvements can be implemented. Choices have to be made, and striking the right balance between the public's right to know and a parliamentarian's privacy is a delicate matter and never easy. To that end, it is vital that work continue on revisions and improvements to the Conflict of Interest Code for Senators, which exists for the daily quidance of senators.

My office worked closely with the Standing Committee on Conflict of Interest for Senators as it reviewed the Code in 2007. Important changes flowed from that work, and were approved by the Senate in 2008. During meetings with the Committee in 2009 and 2010, I raised the issue of further amendments to the Code. As I prepare to leave office, there are a number of areas that, based on my years of experience in interpreting and applying the Code, I believe require revision. Such changes are both desirable and necessary to ensure that the Code will adequately and efficiently serve both senators and the citizens of Canada in the coming years. My major recommendations are as follows:

1. As is the case in other jurisdictions in Canada, the inquiry reports of the Senate Ethics Officer should be available to the public immediately upon completion. At present, these reports would be submitted confidentially and filed away, never to see the light of day. In this age of increasing demands for greater government transparency, this is almost impossible to defend. The current approach not only compromises the independence and integrity of the Office of the Senate Ethics Officer, it also leaves the erroneous impression that senators are investigating one another. In the absence of openness, transparency and accountability, the public and the media will suspect that senators are covering up for each other. In my respectful opinion, the Senate is ill-served by this practice. In today's high-speed technological and social media environment, where very little can be kept confidential for very long and where bad news travels fast, the Senate should consider the reputational cost of waiting until a "scandal" has emerged, or a formal inquiry is launched, before making this change. Prompt attention to amend this procedure by making inquiry reports of

ORIGINS OF THE CANADIAN MODEL OF PARLIAMENTARY ETHICS<sup>2</sup>

Canada's first independent parliamentary ethics commissioner was appointed in Ontario some twenty years ago. Following a series of political scandals in the mid-1980's, the government of the day asked the Honourable John Black Aird, OC, QC (1923-1995) a former Lieutenant Governor of the Province, to recommend new rules of conduct for members of the Legislature and new mechanisms for implementing and enforcing these rules. His report led to the establishment under statute of an independent ethics commissioner with responsibility for both ministers and members of the Ontario legislature, and to the adoption of rules of conduct.

The most important element of the new system was the independence of the commissioner. As the report made clear, "... the keystone to a new system is the appointment of one person as a Commissioner of Compliance to perform these and other functions... Obviously, the individual filling the role must be seen by the public as independent and authoritative. I therefore believe that he or she should be chosen by the Legislature..."

The Aird recommendations may be rightly described as the source of the Canadian model of parliamentary ethics and the independence of parliamentary ethics commissioners in Canada. While the title of the position varies in the different jurisdictions, an integrity commissioner, a conflict of interest commissioner, or an ethics officer is to be found today in every province and territory, as well as federally in both Houses of Parliament. Their status, duties and powers are broadly similar.<sup>3</sup>

the Senate Ethics Officer public would be a clear statement that the Conflict of Interest Code for Senators is in keeping with Canadian parliamentary ethics, values and practices, as well as public expectations.

- 2. In order to bring the Code up to current standards of transparency and accountability, it should be amended to require the public disclosure of the source and nature (but not the dollar value) of any non-Senate income over $2,000 per annum as well as any assets and liabilities over $10,000. To our knowledge, no other jurisdiction, in Canada and elsewhere, restricts public disclosure in the manner stipulated in the current Senate Code. An important change is required here.
- 3. Under the current Code, senators are required to disclose only limited information about their family members. To better assist the Senate Ethics Officer in advising senators about real or potential conflicts of interest, the Code, in my view, should be strengthened by amendment to require senators to disclose on an annual basis any officer or director positions that a family member may hold, as well as any sources of income over $2,000 and any assets and liabilities over $10,000, again without supplying a specific dollar figure. Most jurisdictions in Canada, the House of Lords, the United States Senate and the Australian Senate require more disclosure of the outside interests and financial assets of family members than is currently required by Canadian senators of their family members. This is another opportunity for the Senate to show ethical leadership and great transparency, and align its procedures with best practices extant elsewhere.
- 4. Canadians attach a high degree of importance to matters of governance, ethics and transparency involving their parliamentary representatives and believe such information should be readily accessible. In order to bring Senate practices into the 21st century, the information in the Public Registry should be available online as in the case of other jurisdictions. Canadians living in Vancouver, Inuvik or Charlottetown should have as easy access to this information as those living in the National Capital region.

These are the immediate issues which I believe require swift action to amend the Code. I further recommend that the Senate begin laying the groundwork for a comprehensive review of the Code in 2013. As noted earlier, the last review was completed in 2008 and a review of the Code is required every five years. Each and every provision should be reviewed in light of past experience to determine if it still serves its purpose and meets existing best practices, with amendments where necessary to ensure that it maintains its relevancy and effectiveness. This would also be an opportunity to review and clarify the disclosure forms in order to provide greater certainty and guidance for senators concerning the disclosure requirements under the Code, particularly with respect to income, assets and liabilities.

Conclusion

There is no intent in this report to imply in any fashion that the Code and its administration are broken. I have, on numerous occasions, stated to both national and international audiences that the present Canadian Senate ethics regime in general works well, largely because senators are very much aware of their responsibilities and obligations under the Code and are diligent in regularly seeking advice from the Senate Ethics Office about situations that could be problematic.

However, it is my strong view that the Senate should not accept a continuation of the deficiencies which have been identified. These are specific instances where the Senate Code is lacking in transparency and accountability and lagging behind best practices in other jurisdictions. The mandate of the Code, as spelled out in paragraph 2 (1) (b), is that it "maintain and enhance public confidence and trust in the integrity of each senator and in the Senate". It is in order to better fulfill that commitment that I have respectfully identified several important changes that I believe should be considered by the Senate at this time, even ahead of the 2013 mandatory review.

I have always thought that the Senate of Canada could and should play a leadership role in this field of parliamentary ethics and serve as an example to other Upper Houses. The ultimate responsibility for the Code lies with the Senate itself because it is the final authority concerning the conduct of its members. Senators "own the Code", so to speak, and as its owners, are charged with maintaining and enhancing its efficacy and relevance. Senators are ultimately accountable to Canadians in this regard. It is for them to take the Code to the next level, to demonstrate initiative and responsible leadership.

I have every hope that the advice provided in this Annual Report, based on six years of experience working with the Code and assisting senators to ensure their compliance with its provisions, will be useful in assisting the new Standing Committee on Conflict of Interest for Senators chaired by Senator Stratton, and my successor, in shaping a document that will be a model worthy of international emulation and commendation.

As I retire from a forty-five year career in the public service, capped with the distinction of being the first Canadian Senate Ethics Officer, I depart knowing that the Senate conflict of interest regime has a solid foundation upon which to write the next chapter of ethical parliamentary leadership. I wish the Senate every success in this endeavor, with the belief that its members not only understand what is right, but have the political will to do what is right.

1. INTRODUCTION

The position of Senate Ethics Officer was established under the Parliament of Canada Act (sections 20.1 to 20.7 of the Act).<sup>4</sup> It is a seven year term (subsection 20.2(1)) at the rank of a deputy head of a department of the Government of Canada (subsection 20.4(1)). The appointment is made by the Governor in Council after consultation with the leader of every recognized party in the Senate and following the adoption of a resolution in the Senate approving the appointment (section 20.1). This is to ensure that the appointment has the broadest support of the Senate irrespective of party affiliation.

The Senate Ethics Officer is an independent Officer of the Senate whose authority derives both from the Parliament of Canada Act and the Conflict of Interest Code for Senators. His primary responsibility is to administer, interpret and apply the Conflict of Interest Code for Senators. He is appointed on the recommendation of the Senate and reports directly to the Senate. There are many provisions of the Parliament of Canada Act that clearly demonstrate the importance Parliament attaches to the independence of the Senate Ethics Officer. He has the control and management of his Office (subsection 20.4(1)), which he runs independently from the Senate and the Standing Senate Committee on Internal Economy, Budgets and Administration. The Officer hires his own staff independent of the Senate (subsections 20.4(2), (3) and (4)) and has the responsibility for preparing the estimate of the sums required to pay the charges and expenses of his Office (subsection 20.4(7)). This estimate is separate from the estimates of the Senate. He provides these to the Speaker of the Senate, who considers them and then transmits them to the President of the Treasury Board, who in turn lays them before the House of Commons with the estimates of the Government for the fiscal year (subsection 20.4(8)). The Senate Ethics Officer may be asked to appear before the Standing Senate Committee on National Finance to answer questions about his proposed budget as part of the Committee's review of the Main Estimates.

The Officer is also required to prepare an annual report to the Speaker of the Senate, who must table this report in the Senate (section 20.7).

While the above legislative measures ensure the independence and autonomy of the Senate Ethics Officer, the Parliament of Canada Act provides that both the Senate Ethics Officer and the Conflict of Interest and Ethics Commissioner, in respect of her responsibilities for members of the House of Commons, carry out their duties and functions under the general direction of a committee of each House that may be designated or established for this purpose. While the Senate Ethics Officer reports to the Senate, the Senate has effectively delegated responsibility to the Standing Senate Committee on Conflict of Interest for Senators to oversee the conflict of interest regime and to act as the link between the Senate and the Senate Ethics Officer.

The duties and responsibilities of the Senate Ethics Officer are set out under the Conflict of Interest Code for Senators, adopted by the Senate in May 2005 and revised in May 2008.6 This Code reinforces the independent nature of the Senate Ethics Officer, particularly in interpreting and applying the Code as it relates to the particular circumstances of individual senators, while at the same time recognizing his accountability to the Senate.7 I am able to state unequivocally and with gratitude that during my entire term of office, there has been no attempt to compromise my independence, a reflection of the respect that senators have for the Office and the Code it administers. Such independence is essential in order to ensure that the Senate Ethics Officer is free to undertake investigations and provide considered advice to senators as he sees fit, in a fully impartial and transparent manner without fear or favour, and without the appearance of any outside influence or coercion.

Over the last 25 years, starting with Ontario in 1988, all provinces, territories and both Houses of Parliament have appointed parliamentary ethics commissioners, sometimes referred to as conflict of interest commissioners or integrity commissioners, with the necessary degree of independence to have credibility and retain the confidence of both the public and parliamentarians when fulfilling their duties. Independent ethics commissioners are one of the distinctive features of the Canadian model of parliamentary ethics, a term used to describe the uniquely Canadian ethics regimes which have developed in legislatures across this country. Other common features of the Canadian model include rules of conduct and disclosure requirements that are broadly similar, legislative ethics committees in some jurisdictions, and a strong emphasis on prevention and face-to-face meetings with parliamentarians. After six years of experience, I can state that the Canadian model is arguably better than existing models in other countries. In particular, it brings a higher level of transparency, accountability and public confidence than can be expected from self-regulatory models. Table 1 on page 10 presents certain features of the Canadian model in a comparative perspective.8

2. HIGHLIGHTS

This year was a busy and productive year for the Office. Some of the activities in which we were engaged included providing opinions and advice to senators, guiding senators through the annual review process, as well as outreach activities.

Four new senators were appointed this year. As is my usual practice with respect to newly summoned senators, I provided them with a package of information and materials concerning the Conflict of Interest Code for Senators. I also met with them individually and provided them with a general briefing about the Code, as well as information concerning the services my Office provides. In this context, I always emphasize for senators the importance of complying with their obligations under the Code and that, while I am able to provide them with assistance in better understanding the rules, they also have a responsibility to ensure that they are familiar with them in order to be able to recognize a potential problem area in respect of their own circumstances and to seek advice when needed. Senators have a responsibility to understand what it means to uphold the highest standards to ensure public confidence in the institution – that to simply comply with the strict letter of the rules may not be enough.

Over the course of my term in office which began in April 2005, this type of briefing has been given to 55 new senators.

During a typical year, I appear two or three times before the Standing Committee on Conflict of Interest for Senators. In particular, I have appeared before the Committee in the past to discuss my annual report after it has been tabled in the Senate, as well as to propose amendments to the Conflict of Interest Code for Senators. This year was an exception; I did not appear before the Committee. However, I have used the opportunity presented in the introduction of this report to again draw attention to areas where I believe the Code can and should be amended to improve its effectiveness and transparency. It is worth noting that, in the course of the year, there were some changes in the membership of the Committee. The Committee is currently comprised of the following members: the Honourable Terry Stratton (Chair), the Honourable Serge Joyal, P.C. (Deputy Chair), the Honourable Raynell Andreychuk, the Honourable David Angus, Q.C., and the Honourable Jane Cordy.

3. THE YEAR IN REVIEW: 2010-2011

(1) Opinions and Advice

As I have noted in my previous annual reports, my primary role is an advisory one. This year, I provided 225 opinions and advice to senators on matters of varying degrees of complexity, of both a formal and informal nature, in writing and orally, concerning their obligations under the Conflict of Interest Code for Senators and to assist them in remaining in compliance with the Code. As in past years, this number is illustrative of the fact that senators continue to appreciate and avail themselves of my services in this regard. This aspect of my work occupies the largest part of my time. The main areas in relation to which senators seek advice and opinions include: activities outside their official parliamentary duties, sponsored travel, gifts and other benefits, declarations of private interests, contracts or business arrangements with the federal government or any federal agency or body, and disclosure requirements.

Formal opinions and advice

Under subsection 42(1) of the Code, a senator may make a request in writing to the Senate Ethics Officer for an opinion on any matter concerning his or her obligations under the Code. In such cases, I am required to respond in writing as well under this same provision.

Under subsection 42(2), such an opinion is binding on me in any subsequent consideration of the subject matter of the opinion, in any proceedings under the Code, as long as all the relevant facts that were known to the senator were disclosed to me. Moreover, any written advice is also binding under the same circumstances (subsection 42(3)).

A written opinion or advice is also confidential in nature and may only be made public by the senator concerning which the opinion or advice relates or I may do so with his or her written consent (subsection 42(4)).

In the last year, I also prepared numerous written opinions and advice to individual senators as part of the annual disclosure process based on the interests they disclosed in the course of the annual review process. In such cases, I generally provided advice on potential conflicts by anticipating areas that could be of concern under the Code and recommending measures, if necessary, to ensure that senators are in compliance with the Code.

Informal verbal advice

There are also circumstances in which informal discussions are appropriate. This is consistent with the practice of other parliamentary ethics commissioners in Canada. For example, a senator may wish to discuss an activity with me that he or she is contemplating in order to determine whether or not it would, in my view, raise concerns under the Code. While these informal exchanges are valuable and may be important in assisting senators in better understanding the Code and its application to their particular circumstances, they do not constitute a formal approval by the Senate Ethics Officer of a specific course of action. Senators may obtain such approval by making a formal request in writing to the Senate Ethics Officer, including all the pertinent facts so that he can properly assess the situation and provide an appropriate opinion.

Verbal communications may also be appropriate in the context of routine requests, for example, questions concerning the proper forms to be used in different contexts, such as the forms concerning gifts, other benefits, and sponsored travel, and those concerning declarations of private interests, as well as the timelines for filing these and other documents.

Although the decision as to whether to seek a formal written opinion from me or to obtain verbal advice is one which senators must make, in practice, even where a senator has not requested an opinion in writing, if the matter is of a complex and detailed nature, I will ordinarily ask senators to set out their request in letter format and, in those circumstances, I will provide my opinion to them in writing as well. This is important given the risk of misunderstandings that could result from verbal communications.

My advisory role is essential in ensuring that senators understand the conflict of interest rules to which they are subject with the objective of preventing conflicts from arising wherever possible. In this regard, my approach has always been, not only to advise on real and potential conflicts, but also to provide advice on apparent conflicts, a notion which is addressed in paragraph 2(1)(c) of the Conflict of Interest Code for Senators. In other words, in my advisory capacity, I have often found it useful to be able to rely on the concept of apparent conflicts, even where I do not find that there would be a technical breach of any of the provisions of the Code. I have found that this notion is helpful in emphasizing to senators the importance of not only avoiding conflicts of interests altogether, but also avoiding the appearance of conflicts of interests. And in cases of doubt, my advice is generally to err on the side of caution.

In my view, when a request for an opinion or advice is made, a timely response is critical. My objective has always been to provide responses to senators as soon as possible. Obviously, in cases where the matter is of a more complex nature that requires significant research and analysis, the response time will be longer. Over the years, I have received positive feedback from senators about the promptness of responses from this Office to their requests for opinions and advice.

My counterparts in other Canadian jurisdictions also attach great importance to encouraging members to seek their advice as often as possible, especially in cases of doubt prior to taking action. There are numerous precedents of which legislators may be unaware; there may also be interpretation issues with respect to the relevant rules. Helping parliamentarians understand all this by means of the advisory function is vital.

To quote Robert Clark, a distinguished former ethics commissioner from the province of Alberta, the role of a commissioner is "90% priest and 10% policeman". I wholeheartedly agree and have followed a similar approach in the Senate over the last six years.

This emphasis on advice and prevention is one of the recognized strengths of the Canadian model of parliamentary ethics when compared to other countries.

(2) Annual Disclosure Process

Under subsection 27(1) of the Conflict of Interest Code for Senators, senators are required to file a confidential disclosure statement, on an annual basis, on a date that is established by me with the approval of the Standing Committee on Conflict of Interest for Senators (subsection 27(2)). In practice, the annual disclosure process begins in the fall of each year.

Newly appointed senators must file their statements within 120 days after being summoned to the Senate.

The confidential disclosure statements must include information concerning senators' assets, liabilities, income, federal government contracts, and certain activities in which senators are engaged outside of their parliamentary duties and functions. With respect to the latter, the list of outside activities in which senators may participate is found in section 5 of the Conflict of Interest Code for Senators. This provision is almost identical to its corresponding provision in the Conflict of Interest Code for Members of the House of Commons. In their confidential disclosure statements, senators must report whether they hold an official position in a corporation, a not-for-profit organization, an association, a trade union or an income trust, and whether they are a partner in a partnership. Subsection 28(1) sets out the list of interests that senators are required to report confidentially.

CONFLICT OF INTEREST, PRE-AND-POST COMMISSIONER<sup>11</sup>

In 2005, York University Professor Ian Greene released the results of a study in which he compared the number of reported conflicts of interest in provincial and territorial jurisdictions, before and after the introduction of parliamentary ethics commissioners and rules of conduct for parliamentarians some twenty years ago. The findings do not apply to the Senate or the House of Commons as neither House had established its own parliamentary ethics regime when Professor Greene undertook his study. Even so, his conclusions are of interest and are well worth repeating here.

First, Professor Greene noted "there has been a dramatic drop in the number of reported conflict of interest media stories since the introduction of parliamentary ethics commissioners". Second, he reported "there has been an even more dramatic drop in the number of substantiated 'events' in most jurisdictions". His findings are all the more significant since, as he notes, "unlike in the pre-commissioner days, there is a quick and credible way of resolving conflict of interest allegations" and therefore more incentive to make a complaint. Even so, he added "the amount of time taken up by conflict of interest stories on radio/television, and the number of columns in the print media has been substantially reduced..."

These findings reflect well on the performance of the Canadian model of parliamentary ethics and suggest that the combination of independent ethics commissioners and explicit codes or rules of conduct provides a solid foundation on which to build. With parliamentary ethics regimes now in place for the House of Commons and Senate, one hopes that conflict of interest allegations will drop at the federal level as well over the coming years.

Under section 5 of the Code, senators are also permitted to engage in employment or practice a profession. However, they are not required to report these particular activities directly, either confidentially under section 28, or publicly under section 31 of the Code. Having said that, they are usually disclosed confidentially to me by virtue of senators having to report the source and nature of income they have received in the preceding 12 months and that they will likely receive in the next 12 months, if the income is over $2,000. Moreover, this income may have to be reported publicly in accordance with paragraph 31(1)(c) of the Code if I determine that the income could relate to the parliamentary duties and functions of the senator or could otherwise be relevant. Of course, when I become aware of these activities, I am able to caution senators about potential conflicts. But, in my view, it would be more helpful to have these activities reported directly, rather than indirectly. This is an issue that should be addressed in the next review of the provisions of the Code. 12

Once these statements have been filed, I provide each senator with a letter of advice, which draws attention to any relevant provisions of the Code and identifies potential conflicts of interest, while also providing advice on how these may be prevented. Of course, where senators have specific questions about a particular situation, they are expected to raise the matter with me and provide the information necessary for me to be able to provide helpful advice.

I then prepare a public disclosure summary for each senator based on the information provided in each senator's confidential disclosure statement. Section 31 of the Code sets out the list of interests that must be publicly disclosed. Again, this list includes certain activities carried on outside a senator's parliamentary duties and functions, as well as income, assets and liabilities where these are related to a senator's parliamentary duties and functions or could otherwise be relevant, and those contracts or other business arrangements with the Government of Canada or a federal agency or body that are acceptable under the Code.

I then meet with each senator individually as part of the annual disclosure process. As I have noted in previous annual reports, this face-to-face annual meeting is one which is most useful not only for myself, but also for senators. Indeed, on several occasions, senators have expressed their appreciation for these exchanges. This is an opportunity for me to both raise any questions I may have concerning senators' confidential disclosure statements, as well as to ensure that the information provided to me is accurate, up-to-date and complete. It is also an opportunity for senators to ask questions concerning the application of the Code to their particular circumstances and to discuss and go over their public disclosure summaries, which senators must sign and return to me. These meetings are an important means by which conflicts of interest may be prevented. Indeed, holding these annual meetings is consistent with the approach taken by most ethics commissioners in other Canadian legislatures. In fact, in eight of these jurisdictions, an annual meeting between the ethics commissioners and the members of the legislature is statutorily required.

The summaries are then placed in the Public Registry -- a registry containing all the information concerning senators that is required to be made public under section 31 the Code, which may be consulted by the public.

It should also be noted that the annual disclosure process is an ongoing process that continues throughout the year, even after all senators' confidential disclosure statements have been filed and all senators' public disclosure summaries are available to the public. Senators have to ensure that their confidential disclosure statements are kept up-to-date throughout the year by filing material change forms with my Office within 60 days of any changes occurring in their circumstances (subsection 28(4) of the Code). These material change forms are included within each senator's public disclosure file if the information contained therein is required to be made public under section 31 of the Code.

In addition, when a senator receives a gift or benefit as a normal expression of courtesy or protocol, or that is within the customary standards of hospitality that normally accompany the senator's position – these are exceptions, under subsection 17(2) of the Code, to the general prohibition in subsection 17(1) against senators receiving gifts and benefits that could reasonably be considered to relate to a senator's position – the fact of its receipt must form part of a senator's public disclosure file, in accordance with paragraph 31(1)(i), if the gift or benefit (or the cumulative value of all such gifts or benefits received from one source in a one year period) is over $500.00. This is also the case with respect to sponsored travel under subsection 18(1). Travel that arises from or relates to a senator's position is also an exception to the general prohibition in subsection 17(1). But any travel that falls within this exception must form part of a senator's public disclosure file, again under paragraph 31(1)(i), if the travel costs exceed $500.00.

Finally, throughout the year, senators must publicly declare any private interests that they have that may be affected by any matters before the Senate or committees of the Senate. These public declarations are also placed in the public disclosure files of the senators to whom these declarations relate. This is required under paragraph 31(1)(h) of the Code.

This year, most senators filed their confidential disclosure statements on time and the public disclosure summaries of all senators are available for public inspection.

(3) Inquiries

Under section 44 of the Conflict of Interest Code for Senators, I may conduct an inquiry: (a) at the direction of the Standing Committee on Conflict of Interest for Senators (subsection 44(1) of the Code); (b) at the request of a senator who has reasonable grounds to believe that another senator has not complied with his or her obligations under the Code (subsection 44(2)); or (c) on my own initiative with the approval of the Committee if, after receiving significant evidence, I believe that an inquiry may be warranted (subsection 44(7) and (8)).

No inquiries were conducted under the Conflict of Interest Code for Senators this year. There is, in my mind, a clear correlation between the number of requests for opinions and advice and the number of inquires that are undertaken. The more requests there are for opinions and advice, and the more prevention and education are emphasized, the less the need for costly and time-consuming inquiries and investigations. An ounce of prevention is indeed worth a pound of cure. In Canadian jurisdictions, investigations by parliamentary ethics commissioners are a rare occurrence. The Canadian model is preventative not punitive.<sup>13</sup>

Over the six years of my service as Senate Ethics Officer, I have only had to deal with two serious allegations that a senator had contravened the Code, one in 2005 and the other in 2009. In both cases, the senators were alleged to have used their positions to benefit a corporation with which they were associated and to have obtained preferential treatment in the awarding of federal government contracts. Following a detailed review of the relevant provisions of the Code and the process for awarding the contracts, I concluded that the allegations against the senators were unsubstantiated and without merit.<sup>14</sup>

&lt;sup>13</sup> Table 2 on page 20 sets out the number of inquiries and investigations by parliamentary ethics commissioners from 2004 to 2010.

(4) Budget

For the year 2010-2011, the Office's total authorities were $823,200. Actual expenditures were $775,906. The 2011-2012 Main Estimates are $829,300.

Our financial statements for the year 2010-2011 were audited by the firm van Berkom & Ritz Chartered Accountants. I am pleased to report that we received a favourable report on the audit. The results of the audit are available on our office Web site at www.parl.gc.ca/seo-cse.

(5) Outreach and External Activities

I consider outreach activities useful, particularly in an area such as ethics and conflict of interest, in order to share best practices and ensure an exchange of information with other organizations responsible for interpreting and applying conflict of interest rules or laws. Conferences, seminars and information sessions are beneficial in order to build one's knowledge of the field, to share experiences, and to consider new approaches and new ideas. I also view these interactions as an opportunity to educate the public about the conflict of interest regime in the Senate and the work of the Office. This year was no exception.

From September 9 to 10, 2010, I attended the annual conference of the Canadian Conflict of Interest Network (CCOIN), which took place in Toronto, Ontario. I was accompanied by the Assistant Senate Ethics Officer and General Counsel. CCOIN is comprised of the various ethics and conflict of interest commissioners across the country at the federal, provincial and territorial levels of government -- primarily those who have jurisdiction over members of legislative bodies. We gather together as a group on an annual basis to discuss issues of common interest and to seek the thoughts and views of colleagues concerning matters related to conflict of interest and ethics. This informal network is also a valuable resource throughout the year; commissioners stay in touch via e-mail and are able to connect with colleagues to seek their views on issues as they arise.

On October 15 and October 19, 2010, I was invited to speak to a class of students at the School of Political Studies within the Faculty of Social Sciences at the University of Ottawa about the Canadian model of parliamentary ethics viewed from an international perspective.

From December 5 to 8, 2010, the Assistant Senate Ethics Officer and General Counsel attended a conference hosted by the Council on Governmental Ethics Laws (COGEL), which was held this year in Washington D.C. COGEL is a professional organization for government agencies, organizations and individuals with responsibilities or interests in governmental ethics, elections, campaign finance, lobby laws and freedom of information. Membership is drawn principally from groups or individuals from the United States and Canada, with some European, Australian, and Latin American members as well. While in Washington, she also had the opportunity to meet with senior officials of the United States Senate Select Committee on Ethics and senior officials of the U.S. House of Representatives Office of Congressional Ethics in order to better understand their system of conflict of interest, and ethics more broadly, as it applies to members of the U.S. Senate and to members of the U.S. House of Representatives, as well as to discuss areas of common interest.

On February 15, 2011, I made a presentation on the conflict of interest regime in the Senate to a group of participants in the Parliamentary Officers' Study Program. This program is designed to provide opportunities for senior parliamentary staff from foreign legislatures and from other Canadian legislatures to learn about the Canadian Parliament and to discuss and exchange views with senior Canadian parliamentary officials on the various procedural, administrative and research services provided to parliamentarians. The program involves the Senate, the House of Commons and the Library of Parliament and takes place in Ottawa.

On March 8, 2011, I made a presentation to a group of graduate students from the School of Public Policy and Administration at Carleton University. A visiting group of students from Georgetown University in Washington, D.C. was also present.

Staff in the Office are members of the Ethics Practitioners' Association of Canada (EPAC), a professional organization comprised of ethics practitioners working and consulting in the field of ethics across Canada. EPAC provides members with information about organizational ethics and with opportunities to discuss and debate best practices in the area of ethics. The Office's Chief Advisor participated in a seminar hosted by EPAC this year.

KEY OBLIGATIONS OF SENATORS UNDER THE CONFLICT OF INTEREST CODE

- Senators may not act in any way to further their private interests, or those of their family members, or to improperly further another person's or entity's private interests when performing parliamentary duties and functions (section 8).
- Senators may not use their position to influence a decision of another person in order to further their own private interests, or those of their family members, or to improperly further another person's or entity's private interests (section 9).
- Senators may not use information that is generally not available to the public to further their own private interests, or those of their family members, or to improperly further another person's or entity's private interests (section 10).
- Senators are expected to make a declaration, orally or in writing, when they have reasonable grounds to believe that they or their family members have a private interest that might be affected by a matter that is before the Senate or a committee of the Senate in which they are members (subsection 12(1)). They may not participate in debate on that matter, nor are they permitted to vote, though they may abstain (subsections 13(1) and (2) and section 14). In the case of committees, senators must also withdraw from the proceedings (subsection 13(2)). With respect to senators who are only participating in committee proceedings, but are not formal members, they too must refrain from participating in debate on any matter in which they have reasonable grounds to believe they have a private interest and they too must withdraw from the proceedings in question (subsection 13(3)).
- Senators may not accept, nor may a family member accept, any gift or other benefit that could reasonably be considered to relate to their position, except as permitted under the Code. Gifts, benefits and sponsored travel that are acceptable under the Code must be declared to the Senate Ethics Officer if they exceed $500.00 in value (sections 17 and 18) and these must be publicly declared pursuant to paragraph 31(1)(i).

KEY OBLIGATIONS OF SENATORS UNDER THE CONFLICT OF INTEREST CODE (CONTINUED)

- Senators may not be parties to, or have interests in corporations or partnerships that are parties to, contracts with the Government of Canada or any federal agency or body under which they receive a benefit, unless specifically authorized by the Senate Ethics Officer (sections 20-26).
- Senators are expected to disclose their private interests to the Senate Ethics Officer on an annual basis and those interests required to be publicly disclosed under the Code are then placed on the public record (sections 27-34).
- Senators must report to the Senate Ethics Officer any material change to the information in their confidential disclosure statements, within the prescribed time (subsection 28(4)).
- Senators must cooperate with the Senate Ethics Officer with respect to any inquiry (subsection 44(12)).

4. THE CODE IN PRACTICE: SELECTED EXAMPLES

We have received favorable comments over the years from senators, their staff and from the general public when we have included in our annual reports examples of some of the considerations that are relevant with respect to the opinions and advice we give to senators to assist them in meeting their obligations under the Code.

The seventeen examples we selected this year are intended to help readers better understand the work of the Office and to draw attention to some of the important provisions of the Code, including gifts, travel, disclosure requirements and inquiries and investigations. That being said, these examples do not constitute formal advice under the Code. They are intended to be educational and informative. They are illustrative and abbreviated as well. They are not actual opinions given by the Senate Ethics Officer.

The advice and opinions given by the Senate Ethics Officer are based on a careful analysis of the Code and each senator's circumstances. Obviously, each situation must be evaluated on its own particular facts and different circumstances will lead to different conclusions. Senators are expected to contact the Office of the Senate Ethics Officer for specific advice and quidance where they have any doubts about the best course of action.

A. Activities Outside Official Parliamentary Duties

1. Issue

A senator inquires as to whether the provision in the Conflict of Interest Code for Senators (the Senate Code) authorizing senators to engage in activities outside their parliamentary duties and functions is also found in the Conflict of Interest Code for Members of the House of Commons (the House Code).

Considerations

Both the conflict of interest code applicable to senators and that applicable to members of the House of Commons authorize private members to engage in outside activities provided they are able to comply with the provisions of the code applicable to them. More specifically, section 5 of the Senate Code provides that senators, who are not ministers of the Crown, may participate in any outside activities, including practicing a profession, carrying on a business or holding official positions in corporations and other bodies, as long as they are able to fulfill their obligations under the Senate Code. Section 7 of the House Code provides that nothing in the House Code precludes members, who are not ministers of the Crown or parliamentary secretaries, from engaging in outside activities

(the list of outside activities being identical to that contained in section 5 of the Senate Code), as long as they are able to fulfill their obligations under the House Code. In fact, the conflict of interest laws in some other Canadian jurisdictions also permit members of legislative assemblies to engage in activities outside their official duties and responsibilities as members of a legislature.

2. Issue

A senator asks whether he can accept an invitation from a not-for-profit organization to be an Honorary Patron of its fundraising campaign. The senator's role would be limited to allowing the use of his or her name and position on the organization's letterhead or other printed and electronic material for the duration of the campaign.

Considerations

Acceptance of this honorary position would be permissible under section 5 of the Code, but would require public disclosure pursuant to paragraph 31(1)(b). Given the senator's involvement with this organization, certain precautions would have to be taken. Specifically and for the duration of the campaign, the senator would be asked to refrain from making representations on behalf of the organization, to the Government of Canada or any federal agency or body, in order to obtain financial assistance or contracts. Moreover, in order to avoid any apparent conflict of interest, the senator would be advised to refrain from being involved in any announcement of federal funding to the organization, should the situation occur.

3. Issue

A senator is asked to become a member of the Board of Directors of a not-for-profit organization which receives federal financial assistance.

Considerations

Although it is acceptable for a senator to sit as a director of a not-for-profit organization (paragraph 5(c) of the Code), this outside activity is subject to certain limitations. For example, the senator would be asked to refrain from making any representations on behalf of the organization for the continued receipt of federal financial assistance. The senator would also be asked to refrain from dealing with federal officials in order to obtain contracts from the federal government or any of its agencies or bodies. These restrictions would address the perception that might be created that the organization is receiving financial assistance due to the senator's involvement with it (section 9 and paragraph 2(1)(c)). The senator would also be asked to abstain from being involved in any future announcements of federal funding to the organization, again, in order to address the perception of a conflict. Finally, public disclosure of the senator's position on the Board of Directors of this organization would be required pursuant to paragraph 31(1)(b) of the Code.

4. Issue

A senator was asked to sit on the Board of Directors of a public corporation and inquires as to whether the Code imposes any restrictions in this regard.

Considerations

Paragraph 5(c) of the Code explicitly authorizes senators, who are not ministers of the Crown, to participate in outside activities, including sitting on the boards of commercial corporations. However, any such positions must be publicly disclosed under paragraph 31(1)(a). In addition, a senator in such circumstances would be asked to comply with certain restrictions. For example, he or she would be required to refrain from personally having any dealings with government officials and, in particular, federal government officials, in order to obtain on behalf of the corporation any financial benefit, including contracts or financial assistance. This restriction would ensure that the senator not only complies, but appears to comply (paragraph 2(1)(c)), with section 9 of the Code. This provision prohibits senators from using or attempting to use their position to influence the decision of another in order to improperly further their own interests, those of their family members, or to improperly further another person's or entity's private interests, as defined under subsection 11(1).

B. Sponsored Travel

5. Issue

A senator asks under what circumstances the Code permits senators to accept sponsored travel.

Considerations

Subsection 18(1) of the Code provides that a senator and guests of the senator may accept sponsored travel if it arises or relates to the senator's position. Where the cost of any such travel exceeds $500.00 and is not paid for by the senator or any guests of the senator, or through international and interparliamentary affairs programs recognized by the Parliament of Canada, or by the Senate, the Government of Canada or the senator's political party, the trip must be disclosed to the Senate Ethics Officer within 30 days after the end of it. As well, paragraph 31(1)(i) requires that any such trip be publicly disclosed.

6. Issue

A senator asks if he may accept free accommodation and travel costs to attend a conference. He has been invited by a not-for-profit organization of which he is a member of the Board of Directors.

Considerations

The senator may accept the offer of free accommodation and travel since he would be attending the conference as a member of the Board of Directors of the organization who offered to pay his expenses. Moreover, there is no requirement for a public declaration in this regard since the benefit falls outside section 18 of the Code. The reason for this is that it relates to the senator's outside activities, not his parliamentary duties and functions. Subsection 18(1), which requires the public disclosure of certain benefits that exceed $500 in value, only pertains to benefits that arise from or relate to a senator's position.

C. Gifts and Other Benefits

7. Issue

A senator is offered a gift that relates to her position in the Senate.

Considerations

Since the gift relates to the senator's position, it is not acceptable under subsection 17(1) of the Code, unless it falls under subsection 17(2) as a normal expression of courtesy or protocol or is within the customary standards of hospitality. In the latter case, the gift is acceptable but a public declaration is required under subsection 17(3) if the value of the gift exceeds $500.

8. Issue

A senator asks whether he may accept free tickets to an NHL hockey game. They have been offered to him by an organization of which he is a member of the Board of Directors.

Considerations

The senator may accept the tickets because they are provided by an organization in which he sits as a member of its board. Section 17 of the Code does not apply in cases where a gift is received in connection with an outside activity. However, care must be taken to avoid any conflict of interest situation. For example, the senator should not, either at the present time or in the foreseeable future, act in any way to further the organization's private interests when performing his parliamentary duties and functions.

9. Issue

A senator asks whether he may accept an honorarium for giving a speech at a conference.

Considerations

Whether the honorarium is acceptable depends on the particular circumstances. If the senator was invited as a senator and his participation relates to his parliamentary duties and responsibilities, the honorarium may not be accepted (subsection 17(1) of the Code). However, if the senator was not invited as a senator, he may accept an honorarium if the speech is clearly unrelated to his parliamentary duties (i.e. given in connection with his outside or professional activities) and the honorarium cannot reasonably be seen to have been given to influence the senator. Examples of speech topics that are unlikely to relate to a senator's parliamentary duties and functions are as follows: leadership and motivation, sports/athletics, negotiation and conflict resolution. In case of doubt, the Senate Ethics Officer should be consulted.

D. Declarations of Private Interests

10. Issue

A senator inquires about the circumstances under which he must make a declaration of a private interest in the Senate or in a committee of which he is a member; the manner in which a declaration must be made; and the restrictions that would be imposed upon him under such circumstances.

Considerations

Under subsection 12(1), the senator must make a declaration of a private interest if he has reasonable grounds to believe that he, or a member of his family, has a private interest that might be affected by a matter that is before the Senate or a committee of the Senate of which he is a member. The senator must make the declaration at the earliest opportunity. The declaration may be made orally on the record or in writing to the Clerk of the Senate if the matter is before the Senate, or to the Clerk of the committee if the matter is before a committee. The declaration will be recorded in the Journals of the Senate if it was made in the Senate, or in the Minutes of Proceedings of the committee if it was made in committee. It is then sent to the Senate Ethics Officer, who must file it in the senator's public disclosure file (subsection 12(3) and paragraph 31(1)(h)). This public file is placed in the Public Registry, along with all other senators' public disclosure files, at the Office of the Senate Ethics Officer and made available for public inspection (subsection 33(1)).

Once the senator makes a declaration of a private interest in the Senate or in the relevant committee, he may not participate in debate or any other deliberations in the Senate or in a committee with respect to that matter (subsections 13(1) and (2)) and he may not vote on the matter but may abstain (section 14). In addition, if the matter is before a Senate committee, the senator must also withdraw altogether from the proceedings in question (subsections 13(2)).

11. Issue

A senator inquires whether she is required to make a second declaration of a private interest under subsection 12(1) of the Code in respect of a bill that is before a committee of the Senate where she had already made such a declaration regarding this measure during the previous parliamentary session.

Considerations

The senator should make a further declaration of a private interest under subsection 12(1) of the Code if the bill in question is reintroduced in the new session. During a prorogation or dissolution of Parliament, all bills die on the Order Paper and most parliamentary committees cease to exist. When Parliament resumes, any bills that are reintroduced would be renumbered. In addition, committees are reconstituted and, consequently, there may be changes in their membership. In light of these circumstances, a further declaration in the new Parliament or the new session makes sense in order to ensure that the public record is clear and that there is no confusion regarding which measure may pose a conflict for the senator in question.

E. Retractions of Declarations of Private Interests

12. Issue

A senator, who is uncertain about whether she is required to make a declaration of private interest, makes one but does so out of abundance of caution. Thereafter, she receives additional information indicating that the declaration was, in fact, not required. She asks what she should do to retract her declaration.

Considerations

Under subsection 12(7), the senator must make a retraction in the same way as she made her initial declaration of private interest. The procedural experts in the Senate and in committees are available to assist senators with the relevant forms and procedures for making retractions. Both the initial declaration and the retraction will remain on the parliamentary record but, under paragraph 31(1)(h) of the Code, the initial declaration will be withdrawn from the senator's public disclosure file, which is kept in the Office of the Senate Ethics Officer.

F. Furthering Private Interests

13 Issue

A senator inquires about section 9 of the Code and in what circumstances it would be relevant.

Considerations

Section 9 of the Code is aimed at ensuring that senators do not use, or attempt to use, their position as senators in order to influence the decisions of individuals, entities, or governments in order to benefit themselves or their family members or to improperly benefit another person or entity in any manner listed under subsection 11(1) of the Code. The provision is very broad and is not limited to influencing decisions of governments to further private interests, although the use of influence in regards to decisions of government respecting the awarding of contracts or other financial benefits is always of particular concern. The advice provided to a senator concerning how to ensure that he or she remains in compliance with section 9 would depend upon the particular facts of the case. However, in cases involving decisions of government, senators would, for example, be cautioned against personally having any dealings with government officials and, in particular, federal government officials, in order to obtain, or seek to obtain, a financial benefit, including contracts or financial assistance, on behalf of themselves, their family members, or on behalf of any entities where to do so would be improper (for example, on behalf of a private corporation in which the senator, or a family member of the senator, holds a position on the Board of Directors). This would include arranging or facilitating meetings with government officials. Taking this precaution also addresses the perception of a conflict (paragraph 2(1)(c)) under section 9.

G. Family Members

14. Issue

A senator inquires as to whether the provisions of the Code are pertinent to her spouse.

Considerations

There are a number of provisions in the Code that concern "family members" of senators, the definition of which (in subsection 3(2) of the Code) includes a senator's spouse or common-law partner. These provisions include sections 8, 9 and 10, which prohibit a senator from furthering or attempting to further their family members' interests, among others, in the circumstances outlined in those provisions.

Under section 12, a senator must make a declaration of any interests his or her family members have in any matter before the Senate or any committee of which he or she is a member. In addition, a senator must not, pursuant to section 13, participate in the debate of any matter before the Senate or a committee of the Senate in which a family member has an interest nor is the senator permitted to vote on such matters (section 14).

Under subsections 17(1) and (2), a family member of a senator is also precluded from accepting, directly or indirectly, any gift or other benefit that could reasonably be considered to relate to the senator's position, unless the matter falls under the exception for gifts or other benefits that are received as a normal expression of courtesy or protocol, or that are within the customary standards of hospitality that normally accompany a senator's position.

Senators are also required to advise the Senate Ethics Officer in their annual confidential disclosure statements if, after making reasonable inquiries, they ascertain that any family member has, directly or through a subcontract, or by virtue of a partnership or a significant interest in a private corporation, an interest in a contract or other business arrangement with the Government of Canada or a federal agency or body (paragraph 28(1)(f)). The Senate Ethics Officer is then required to make this information public as part of the senators' public disclosure summaries, pursuant to paragraph 31(1)(f) of the Code. In addition, the Senate Ethics Officer would advise senators in such circumstances to refrain from any involvement in negotiations or dealings with government officials concerning these contracts or business arrangements, including refraining from arranging or setting up meetings with government officials on behalf of their family members or the entities in which their family members have interests.

Finally, under paragraph 28(1)(h), senators are required to disclose to the Senate Ethics Officer, as part of their confidential disclosure statements, any information, in addition to that specified in paragraphs 28(1)(a) to (g), that they believe to be relevant to the Code. As such, if a senator's spouse has certain interests that the senator believes could come in conflict with the senator's public duties, the senator should disclose these interests to the Senate Ethics Officer in his or her confidential disclosure statement.

H. Opinions and Advice

15. Issue

A senator inquires about the circumstances in which he may obtain a written opinion from the Senate Ethics Officer and the process for seeking such an opinion.

Considerations

Under subsection 42(1) of the Code, the senator may request a written opinion from the Senate Ethics Officer in order to obtain his views on any matter concerning the senator's obligations under the Code, including, for example, an opinion providing guidance to the senator as to the appropriate course of action in a given situation in order to avoid a conflict of interest or an opinion concerning whether the senator has contravened certain provisions of the Code.

With respect to the process for seeking a written opinion, the senator must first make a request in writing to the Senate Ethics Officer. A written opinion or advice provided by the Senate Ethics Officer is confidential and may only be made public by the senator in question or with his or her written consent (subsection 42(4)). Written opinions and written advice are binding on the Senate Ethics Officer in relation to any subsequent consideration of the subject-matter of the opinion or advice as long as all the relevant facts that were known to the senator were disclosed to the Senate Ethics Officer (subsections 42(2) and (3)).

16. Issue

A senator inquires whether all opinions and advice provided by the Senate Ethics Officer must be in writing.

Considerations

The Senate Ethics Officer provides written opinions and advice at the request of a senator under subsection 42(1) of the Code. Obtaining an opinion or advice in writing is particularly important if the matter is complex in nature and requires a more detailed analysis of the provisions of the Code. However, for more routine requests and matters that require little interpretation of the provisions of the Code, the Senate Ethics Officer may provide advice over the telephone or in person.

I. Investigations and Inquiries

17. Issue

A senator asks about the process for initiating a complaint against another senator.

Considerations

A senator who has reasonable grounds to believe that another senator has not complied with his or her obligations under the Code may request that the Senate Ethics Officer conduct an inquiry into the matter (subsection 44(2)). The request must be in writing, signed by the requesting senator and it must identify the alleged non-compliance with the Code and the grounds for the allegation (subsection 44(3)).

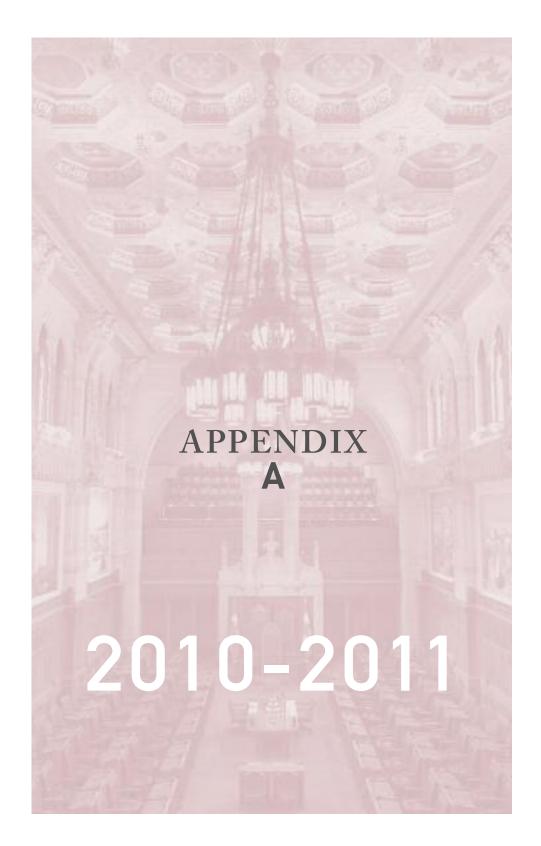

The Senate Ethics Officer is required to forward the request for an inquiry to the senator who is the subject of the allegation and to afford that senator a reasonable opportunity to respond (subsection 44(4)).

The Senate Ethics Officer must then conduct a preliminary review to determine whether or not an inquiry is in fact warranted and he must then notify the requesting senator and the senator who is the subject of the allegation of his decision in this regard (subsection 44(5)). The Senate Ethics Officer must also inform the Conflict of Interest Committee for Senators if he decides that an inquiry is warranted under the circumstances (subsection 44(6)).

There are two other ways in which an inquiry may be conducted by the Senate Ethics Officer: (1) at the direction of the Standing Committee on Conflict of Interest for Senators (subsection 44(1)); and (2) on his own initiative, with the approval of the Committee, if after receiving significant evidence, the Senate Ethics Officer believes that an inquiry may be warranted to determine whether a senator has complied with his or her obligations under the Code (subsections 44(7) and (8)).

SENATE ETHICS OPVICER

CONSEILLER SÉNATOBIAL EN ÉTIBQUE

January 27, 2011

The Honourable Noël A. Kinsella Speaker of the Sonate Room 280-F, Centre Block The Senate of Canada Ottawa, ON K1A 0A4

Dear Senator:

I would like to inform you that I will be leaving my position as Senate Ethics Officer, effective May 2011. It has been a high honour for me to serve as the first Senate Ethics Officer. It is a time and memory I will always cherish. I have enjoyed my tenure and appreciate the cooperation and courtesy which you, your predecessor, the Honourable Dan Hays and your colleagues in the Senate, present and past, have extended to me over the last six years. I hope that in some small way the work of the Office has been useful to senators as they seek to comply with the conflict of interest rules of the Senate and resolve potentially problematic situations.

My decision, which has not been taken lightly, comes after spending 45 years with the Government of Canada (12 years as a Deputy Minister), working in 6 different departments, with 2 Royal Commissions, as High Commissioner to Australia and as Senate Ethics Officer, a position to which I was appointed in April 2005.

Although I am looking forward to the next chapter of my life and to spending more time with my family and friends, it is with regret that I am leaving, having completed six years of a seven-year term. I will greatly miss working with senators, the members of my small staff as well as the great work environment that the Senate provides.

After considerable thought, I have decided it is an opportune time for me to step down and for my successor to continue to build on the solid foundation that has been established. I have often said the Senate Code, like other parliamentary and legislative othics codes across Canada and elsewhere, is a work in progress. Important changes were made in 2008 and I hope that the new Standing Committee on the Conflict of Interest Code for Senators, chaired by Senator Stratton, will soon consider further changes, including those I proposed in my Annual Report 2009-2010 designed to increase the transparency and accountability of the Senate ethics regime and to ensure that the rules of conduct for senators reflect the values and expectations of Canadians over time.

I would like to take this opportunity to express through you, Mr. Speaker, my sincere appreciation to all senators for their support during my term in Office. I will do my utmost to be of assistance to them until my departure. To that end, by the end of May, I expect to have completed my annual meetings with individual senators for the year 2010-2011, the review of the annual disclosure statements in which senators are required to disclose their financial and other interests and the drafting of my sixth and final Annual Report in accordance with the provisions of the Parliament of Canada Act, thus allowing the next Senate Ethics Officer to begin his or her term with a clean state.

I also want to thank the members of the Standing Committee on Conflict of Interest for Senators for their assistance and for the respect they have shown for the independence of the Office. In each of the last six years, the Office provided over 200 opinions and advice to individual senators, both formal and informal, reflective of the level of trust and confidence that has developed between senators and the Office. I also wish to acknowledge with heartfelt thanks the assistance that the Office has received from the Senate Administration over the years in the areas of security, finance, human resources and information technology.

I owe an immense debt of gratitude to my loyal and hard working staff who has been with me since the beginning in 2005. Allow me to express my appreciation and affection to each of them: Louiss Dalphy, Deborah Palumbo, Willard Dionne and Jacques Lalonde. I am proud of the role they played in the development of the Office. Without their support and diligence, the creation of this Office would not have occurred as smoothly and efficiently as it has. They will be of great assistance to my successor.

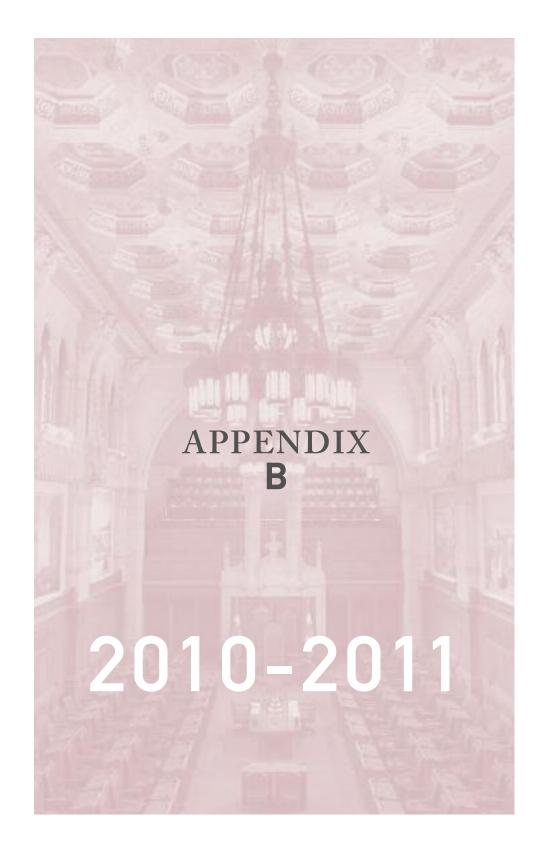

In closing, I propose to send copies of this letter for their information to the Leader of the Government in the Senate, the Honourable Marjory LeBreton, the Leader of the Opposition in the Senate, the Honourable James Cowan, the Chair of the Standing Committee on Conflict of Interest for Senators, the Honourable Terry Stratton, the Deputy Chair of the Standing Committee on Conflict of Interest for Senators, the Honourable Serge Joyal, and to both the Clerk of the Privy Council and the Clerk of the Senate. I also propose to send copies to all other senators to inform them of my plans and to confirm that I will continue to be available over the coming months to advise them concerning their obligations under the Conflict of Interest Code for Senators and to assist them in remaining in compliance with the requirements of the Code.

I would like to work with you in terms of coordinating logistics and timing of a public announcement regarding my departure. Thank you again for your confidence and your understanding in this matter.

Yours sincerely,

I. Fournier

Interest acquired by inheritance

26. The rules in sections 20, 21 and 22 do not apply to an interest acquired by inheritance until the first anniversary date of the transfer of legal and beneficial ownership. In special circumstances, the Senate Ethics Officer may extend this time period.

APPENDIX D

OVERVIEW OF THE CONFLICT OF INTEREST REGIME FOR SENATORS

What follows is a brief description of the duties and responsibilities of the Senate Ethics Officer, of the role of the Standing Committee on Conflict of Interest for Senators, of some of the most important aspects of the Conflict of Interest Code for Senators and of other rules and laws with which senators are expected to comply.

(1) The Senate Ethics Officer

The main responsibilities of the Senate Ethics Officer are to:

- Advise individual senators on a confidential and ongoing basis concerning their obligations under the Code and to assist them in remaining in compliance with the requirements of the Code;
- Oversee the ongoing annual disclosure process in which senators are required to disclose their financial and other interests;
- Conduct inquiries in order to determine whether a senator has complied with his or her obligations under the Code;
- Maintain a registry, available to the public, containing information concerning the financial and other interests of senators that are required to be publicly disclosed under the Code: and
- Submit an annual report of the office's activities to the Speaker of the Senate for tabling in the Senate.

The authority of the Senate Ethics Officer derives both from the Parliament of Canada Act and the Conflict of Interest Code for Senators.

The Parliament of Canada Act was amended in 2004, at which time, a number of sections were added to the Act, including sections 20.1 to 20.7. These provisions established the position of Senate Ethics Officer, defined the mandate of the Office and provided additional details in this regard. The status, duties and powers of the Senate Ethics Officer are broadly similar to those of the Conflict of Interest and Ethics Commissioner in respect of her responsibilities concerning members of the House of Commons, and to those of provincial and territorial ethics commissioners who administer conflict of interest laws applicable to members of legislative assemblies across the country. The Parliament of Canada Act provides that both the Senate Ethics Officer and the Conflict of Interest and Ethics Commissioner carry out their duties and responsibilities under the general direction of a committee of each House of Parliament that is designated or established for that purpose.

The Senate Ethics Officer is an independent Officer of the Senate. He is appointed on the recommendation of the Senate and reports directly to the Senate. There are many provisions of the Parliament of Canada Act that clearly demonstrate the importance Parliament attaches to the independence of the Senate Ethics Officer, including the appointment process, the security of tenure, financial autonomy and reporting relationships. For example, the Senate Ethics Officer is appointed by the Governor in Council after consultation with the leader of every recognized party in the Senate and after approval of the appointment by resolution of the Senate. This method of appointment ensures that the Senate Ethics Officer has the broadest support in the Senate, irrespective of party affiliation. The incumbent is appointed for a renewable term of seven years and may be removed from office, only for cause, by the Governor in Council on address of the Senate.

The Senate Ethics Officer has the rank of a deputy head of a department of the Government of Canada and the Parliament of Canada Act ensures that the Senate Ethics Officer has the control and management of his or her office independent of the Senate. For example, the Senate Ethics Officer is responsible for preparing the estimates of the budget required to operate the office, which are separate and distinct from the estimates of the Senate as a whole. He submits the estimates to the Speaker of the Senate who, after considering them, transmits them to the President of the Treasury Board. They are then laid before the House of Commons with the estimates of the Government for the fiscal year.

Three months after the end of each fiscal year, the Senate Ethics Officer is required to submit a report of his or her activities to the Speaker of the Senate, who tables the report in the Senate. These aspects of the Parliament of Canada Act confer on the Office of the Senate Ethics Officer a status of independence and autonomy and they provide an effective shield against improper or inappropriate influence.

Section 41 of the Code refers explicitly to the Senate Ethics Officer's independence. It provides that he or she is an independent Officer of the Senate who performs the duties and functions assigned by the Senate under the Code. It also makes explicit that he or she is independent in interpreting and applying the Code as it relates to an individual senator's particular circumstances.

(2) The Standing Committee on Conflict of Interest for Senators

Pursuant to subsection 20.5(3) of the Parliament of Canada Act, the Senate established the Standing Committee on Conflict of Interest for Senators (see sections 35 to 40 of the Conflict of Interest Code for Senators) to provide "general direction" to the Senate Ethics Officer. (The House of Commons Standing Committee on Procedure and House Affairs performs a similar function with respect to the Conflict of Interest and Ethics Commissioner in respect of her role concerning members of the House of Commons.) The Senate has effectively delegated responsibility to this Committee to oversee the conflict of interest regime in the Senate and to act as the link between the Senate and the Senate Ethics Officer.

The Committee has an important role to play with respect to any inquiries and investigations that may be undertaken under the Code. It makes recommendations to the Senate concerning sanctions, where it considers them necessary, in cases where a senator has failed to comply with the requirements of the Code. The Senate then is able to act on such recommendations and exercise its constitutional right to discipline its own members by making final determinations in this regard.

The Committee is also responsible for undertaking periodic comprehensive reviews of, and recommending changes to, the Code. In a sense, the Committee is the conscience of the Code. As the person responsible for the administration, interpretation and application of the Code on a day-to-day basis, the Senate Ethics Officer brings issues of concern to the Committee's attention and submits proposals to it in order to clarify and strengthen the Code.

The Committee is comprised of five members: two are elected by secret ballot from the caucus of Government senators, two are elected by secret ballot from the caucus of Opposition senators, and these four members elect the fifth by secret ballot.

(3) The Conflict of Interest Code for Senators

The Conflict of Interest Code for Senators was adopted by the Senate on May 18, 2005 as a document separate from, but of equal standing to, the Rules of the Senate. Amendments were recommended by the Standing Committee on Conflict of Interests for Senators in 2008 as a result of a review required under section 53 of the Code. These changes were adopted by the Senate on May 29, 2008.

The Code outlines a series of rules that are aimed at fostering transparency, accountability and public confidence in the Senate. What follows is a short description of some of the more important aspects of the Code in order to illustrate the nature of the obligations that senators are expected to meet.

A. Purposes (section 1)

The term "conflict of interest" is not explicitly defined in the Code, but the motivation for adopting a code of conduct is clearly set out in section 1. First, the Code is intended to maintain and enhance public confidence and trust in the integrity of senators and of the Senate. Canadians expect their representatives to make decisions that are in the public interest, rather than in their own private interests.

Second, the Code is intended to provide greater certainty and guidance for senators in dealing with foreseeable, real or apparent conflicts. This is important as a matter of fairness. Conflicts of interest may arise inadvertently despite the best of intentions. Indeed, situations may arise in which there is no real conflict, but rather there is only an apparent conflict. However, the appearance of a conflict may be just as damaging to one's reputation as a real conflict. Having a clear set of rules and standards is helpful in raising awareness with respect to, not only what would be a real conflict, but also what could be perceived as a conflict.

The third purpose of the Code builds on the second purpose already discussed above in that it refers to the establishment of clear standards on which to measure conduct. But it also highlights the importance of having a transparent system where questions may be addressed by an independent, impartial adviser. The model, in which an independent officer is charged with the responsibility of administering and applying a set of rules that is outlined, either in a code of conduct or in legislation, has been in place for many years and has worked successfully in Canadian provinces and territories.

The Canadian model of parliamentary ethics has proven to be an effective system because it provides objectivity and credibility to ethics regimes. It is also important because conflict of interest questions are often complex. They are not always easy to resolve and they often require a great deal of time and thought in order to find the best solutions. Having an impartial adviser who reviews these questions and issues on a daily basis and applies a common set of rules and standards to all parliamentarians and legislators is both in the public interest, as well as in the interest of both Houses and legislatures across the country.

B. Principles (section 2)

The Code also contains certain principles set out in section 2 that serve to guide the interpretation of the various provisions of the Code. These principles read as follows:

- 2. (1) Given that service in Parliament is a public trust, the Senate recognizes and declares that Senators are expected
  - (a) to remain members of their communities and regions and to continue their activities in those communities and regions while serving the public interest and those they represent to the best of their abilities;
  - (b) to fulfil their public duties while upholding the highest standards so as to avoid conflicts of interest and maintain and enhance public confidence and trust in the integrity of each Senator and in the Senate; and
  - (c) to arrange their private affairs so that foreseeable real or apparent conflicts of interest may be prevented from arising, but if such a conflict does arise, to resolve it in a way that protects the public interest.

(2) The Senate further declares that this Code shall be interpreted and administered so that Senators and their families shall be afforded a reasonable expectation of privacy.

The first principle is an important one given the unique role the Senate plays in Canada's constitutional framework. The Senate's one hundred and five members are summoned by the Governor General on the advice of the Prime Minister. They are expected to represent regional interests and to reconcile the national interest with regional aspirations. In order to do so, it is key for them to foster a better understanding of the issues that affect the regions they represent. They are able to do so by remaining connected to their communities and regions. Moreover, senators come from various backgrounds, professions and fields of expertise. This diversity enhances the knowledge and experience they are able to bring to their examination of public policy issues and it is one of the strengths of the Senate.

It is important to note that, unlike Cabinet ministers, senators do not control the public finances and they are constitutionally limited in this regard. As such, there are more restrictions that apply to Cabinet ministers in terms of their outside activities. By contrast, and as already noted above, senators are not only permitted, but they are expected, to continue to be involved and active in their communities and regions in order to better represent regional interests.

Having said that, these outside activities may give rise to situations in which a conflict, or the appearance of a conflict, may develop between a senator's private activities and the public interest. In such cases, paragraph 2(1)(c) of the principles is important; it indicates that any such conflict or apparent conflict is to be resolved in favour of the public interest.

The second principle outlined in the Code provides that senators are expected to fulfill their public duties while upholding the highest standards in order to avoid conflicts of interest. This recognizes the trust that Canadians have placed in their parliamentarians as they carry out their duties and functions, as well as the high standards that Canadians expect of them.

The third principle makes reference to apparent conflicts. Senators are expected to arrange their private affairs so that, not only real, but also apparent conflicts may be prevented from arising.

The principles of the Code strike a delicate balance between permitting senators to play the unique constitutional role they were intended to play, while ensuring that their private affairs and outside activities do not take precedence over the public interest where these two come into conflict.

C. Activities Outside Official Parliamentary Duties (section 5)

The Conflict of Interest Code for Senators (Senate Code) authorizes senators who are not ministers to engage in activities outside their official parliamentary duties and functions provided they are able to comply with the provisions of the Code. More specifically, section 5 of the Code authorizes such activities, including practicing a profession, carrying on a business or holding official positions in corporations and other bodies, by senators who are not ministers of the Crown. As a matter of interest, section 7 of the Conflict of Interest Code for Members of the House of Commons (MP Code) is virtually identical to section 5 of the Senate Code. It provides that nothing in the MP Code precludes members, who are not ministers of the Crown or parliamentary secretaries, from engaging in outside activities (the list of outside activities being identical to that contained in section 5 of the Senate Code), as long as they are able to fulfill their obligations under the MP Code. In fact, the conflict of interest laws in some other Canadian jurisdictions also permit members of legislative assemblies to engage in activities outside their official duties and responsibilities as members of a legislature.

D. Rules of Conduct

The Conflict of Interest Code for Senators builds on the overarching principles set out in section 2 through a number of rules of conduct. These rules deal with furthering private interests, use of influence, use of information, declarations of private interests, gifts and other benefits, sponsored travel and federal government contracts.

(a) Private Interests (sections 8 to 16)

In the performance of their parliamentary duties and functions, senators are prohibited from acting or attempting to act in any way to further their private interests, or those of a family member, or to improperly further another person's or entity's private interests (section 8). Moreover, they are not to use or attempt to use their position to influence the decisions of others in order to further these same interests (section 9).

The use of, attempt to use, and the conveying of, information that is not generally available to the public to further these private interests is also prohibited (section 10).

The Code sets out what is covered by the phrase "furthering private interests" (section 11). It includes taking action to increase or preserve the value of assets, to eliminate or reduce liabilities, and to become a director or officer in a corporation or organization. However, it excludes, for example, matters of general application and those that apply to a broad class of the public.

A senator is expected to declare, orally or in writing, the general nature of a private interest where the senator has reasonable grounds to believe that he or she or a family member has such an interest in a matter that is before the Senate, or a Senate committee of which the senator is a member. Moreover, the senator is not permitted to participate in debate or to vote on the matter and, in the case of committee matters, the senator must withdraw from the proceedings in question (subsections 12(1), 13(1), (2) and section 14).

A senator who is only participating in a committee proceeding but is not a member of the committee is also prohibited from participating in debate on a matter in which he or she has reasonable grounds to believe he or she, or a family member, has a private interest that might be affected by the matter before the committee. In such cases, the senator must also withdraw from the proceedings in questions (subsection 13(3)).

Where a senator made a declaration of a private interest out of an abundance of caution, but he or she later determines that the declaration was in fact unnecessary, he or she may retract the declaration in accordance with the rules provided under the Code for doing so (subsection 12(7)).

(b) Gifts, Other Benefits and Sponsored Travel (sections 17 and 18)

Senators and their family members are not permitted to accept any gifts or benefits that could reasonably be considered to relate to the senator's position (subsection 17(1)). An exception is made for gifts or benefits that are expressions of courtesy, protocol or that are within the customary standards of hospitality that normally accompany a senator's position (subsection 17(2)). However, even if the gift or benefit falls under the exception, if its value exceeds $500.00, or if the total value received from one source in one year exceeds $500.00, then the senator must file a statement with the Senate Ethics Officer disclosing the nature, value, and source of the gifts or benefits, and the circumstances under which they were received (subsection 17(3)).

This disclosure must occur within 30 days after the receipt of the gifts or benefits, or within 30 days after the value of all such gifts or benefits received from the same source in a one year period exceeds $500.00, as the case may be (subsection 17 (3)).

A senator and guests of the senator may, however, accept sponsored travel that relates to the senator's position. Where the cost of any such travel exceeds $500.00, and where the travel is not paid for by the senator, or his or her guests, or through any international and interparliamentary affairs programs recognized by the Parliament of Canada, the Senate, the Government of Canada, or the senator's political party, the trip must, however, be disclosed to the Senate Ethics Officer within 30 days after the end of the trip (section 18).

(c) Federal Government Contracts (sections 20 to 26)

A senator may not be a party, directly or indirectly, to a contract or other business arrangement with the federal government or any federal agency or body under which the senator receives a benefit. There are two exceptions to this rule: (1) the contract or arrangement is in the public interest due to special circumstances; and (2) the contract or arrangement is unlikely to affect the senator's obligations under the Code. In the case of either exception, the Senate Ethics Officer must provide a written opinion regarding the matter (section 20), which is then made public pursuant to paragraph 31(1)(d). Participation in federal government programs is also permissible if certain conditions are met (section 23).

A senator may own securities in a public corporation that has contracts with the federal government or any federal agency or body unless the interest is so significant that the Senate Ethics Officer is of the view that it is likely to affect the senator's obligations under the Code (subsection 21(1)). Again, there is a public interest exception in the case of interests in a public corporation (subsection 21(2)). Participation in a federal government program is also not considered to be a contract (subsection 21(3)). Moreover, a senator may comply with the Code by placing the securities in a trust under such terms set by the Senate Ethics Officer (subsection 21(4)).

A senator is prohibited from having an interest in a partnership or a private corporation that is a party, directly or through a subcontract, to a contract or other business arrangement with the federal government or any federal agency or body under which the partnership or corporation receives a benefit. Again, the two exceptions outlined above (i.e., public interest and obligations not affected under the Code) apply (section 22) and, in such circumstances, the Senate Ethics Officer's opinions authorizing such contracts are made public pursuant to paragraph 31(1)(e). Participation in federal government programs is also permissible provided certain conditions are met (section 23). Finally, such an interest is permissible if a trust, with certain specified conditions, is established (section 24).

E. Disclosure Process (sections 27 to 34)

The Code requires each senator to submit to the Senate Ethics Officer an annual confidential disclosure statement listing sources of income, assets, liabilities, outside activities, and government contracts in accordance with sections 27 and 28. All sitting senators are required to file annually, on or before a date to be established by the Senate Ethics Officer with the approval of the Standing Committee on Conflict of Interest for Senators (subsections 27(1) and (2)). Newly appointed senators are required to submit the statements within 120 after being summoned to the Senate (subsection 27(3)).

The Senate Ethics Officer reviews the information, advises individual senators on possible conflicts, or apparent conflicts, and then recommends measures, if necessary, to ensure senators are in compliance with the provisions of the Code.

Senators must continue to remain in compliance with the Code at all times. This is done by reporting to the Senate Ethics Officer any material changes to the information provided in their confidential disclosure statements within 60 days of any such change occurring (subsection 28(4)). Moreover, and as already noted earlier, an annual review of the senator's confidential disclosure statement and compliance arrangements is conducted by the Senate Ethics Officer (subsection 27(1)).

Based on the information contained in the confidential disclosure statement and any other additional information provided that may be relevant, the Senate Ethics Officer must prepare a public disclosure summary related to each senator (section 30). These summaries are then made available for public inspection at the Office of the Senate Ethics Officer (subsection 33(1)).

F. Opinions and Advice (section 42)

The Senate Ethics Officer provides opinions and advice to senators regarding their obligations under the Code pursuant to section 42. Although the Code requires that these opinions and advice be kept confidential, they may be made public by the senator to whom they were given, or by the Senate Ethics Officer with the senator's written consent (subsection 42(4)). Moreover, some opinions related to contracts with the federal government or any federal agency or body must be made public under section 31 of the Code.

The importance of this advisory function should not be underestimated. While each senator is responsible for arranging his or her affairs in such a way as to prevent any foreseeable real or apparent conflicts of interest, if a senator has any doubt about whether there may be a conflict or a perceived conflict, he or she is encouraged to consult the Senate Ethics Officer on a confidential basis to resolve the matter. This approach is preventative, not punitive. The focus is not on addressing conflicts of interest once they have arisen, but rather on preventing them from arising.

G. Inquiries and Investigations (sections 44 to 49)

The Senate Ethics Officer may initiate an inquiry to determine whether a senator has complied with his or her obligations under the Code: (i) at the direction of the Standing Committee on Conflict of Interest for Senators (subsection 44(1)); (ii) at the request of another senator (subsections 44(2) to (6)); or (iii) where the Officer has reasonable grounds to believe that an inquiry is warranted and has obtained the approval of the committee (subsections 44(7) to (9)).

Inquiries are confidential (subsection 44(11)) and senators are required to cooperate with the Senate Ethics Officer (subsection 44(12)). He or she has the power to send for persons, papers, and records, for the purpose of an inquiry (subsection 44(13)).

Once an inquiry is completed, the Officer is required to prepare a written report that includes recommendations to the Standing Committee on Conflict of Interest for Senators (section 45), which may then report to the Senate (subsections 46(4), (5), (6), (7) and (8)). Any appropriate action or sanctions would be determined by the Senate. The reports of the Senate Ethics Officer are not available to the public.

H. Committee Review (section 53)

The Standing Committee on Conflict of Interest for Senators is required to undertake a review of the provisions of the Code and its operation every five years. The Committee must submit a report to the Senate on this review, including its recommendations respecting changes to the Code (section 53).

(4) Other Rules and Laws

There are other rules and laws with which senators are expected to comply, in addition to the rules that were brought into effect when the Office of the Senate Ethics Officer was established.

For example, section 16 of the Parliament of Canada Act prohibits a senator from receiving, or agreeing to receive outside compensation, whether directly or indirectly, for services rendered or to be rendered to any person, either by the senator or another person, in relation to any matter before the Senate or the House of Commons or any of their committees; or for the purpose of influencing or attempting to influence any member of either House.

Sections 119, 121 and 122 of the Criminal Code are also applicable to senators in light of the Supreme Court of Canada's interpretation of these provisions. Section 119 deals with offences related to bribery. Section 121 concerns frauds on the government and is aimed in part at influence peddling. Section 122 creates offences relating to fraud and breach of trust.

The Senate Administrative Rules, which were adopted by the Senate and came into force on May 6, 2004, and were revised in 2007, contain some provisions relating to the proper allocation and use of Senate resources. Sections 1 and 6 of Chapter 3:01 of these Rules provide that Senate resources must only be used for parliamentary functions and for the service of the Senate.

The provisions referred to above in the Criminal Code, the Senate Administrative Rules, and section 16 of the Parliament of Canada Act do not come within the purview of the Senate Ethics Office.

The Senate Disclosure Process in Brief

Disclosure is at the heart of any effective and transparent conflict of interest regime for parliamentarians. This document summarizes the Senate disclosure process under the Conflict of Interest Code for Senators (the Code). It breaks down the process in 10 individual steps. Each step is described below.

- The annual disclosure process generally begins in the fall of each year when Parliament resumes after its summer recess. To initiate the process, the Senate Ethics Officer (the SEO) sends a Confidential Disclosure Statement to each senator, which is required to be completed under section 27 of the Code. The information that must be declared includes any sources of income over $2,000, any assets and liabilities over $10,000, any outside activities and any federal government contracts.
- Sitting senators are asked to complete and return their confidential disclosure statement within 3 weeks. The date on or before which the disclosure statements have to be filed is established by the SEO following approval by the Standing Committee on Conflict of Interest for Senators. Newly appointed senators have 120 days to file.
- The SEO reviews the information received in order to identify any foreseeable, real or apparent conflicts of interest. The review also provides an opportunity to identify omissions or ambiguities and to ensure that the information is complete and up-to-date.
- 4. Based on this information, the SEO sends a letter of advice to each senator regarding his or her particular obligations under the Code and recommends measures, if necessary, to ensure that they are in compliance with the Code.
- 5. The SEO is also required to prepare an annual Public Disclosure Summary pertaining to each senator. Section 31 of the Code sets out the information that must be included therein.

- 6. This is followed by face to face meetings with senators, which usually commence in November of each year and end in March. These meetings are an important opportunity to discuss each senator's disclosure statement, the SEO's letter of advice as well as the senator's public disclosure summary. The meetings are also an opportunity for senators to discuss future plans and to obtain advice in this regard.
- Once a senator signs his or her public disclosure summary, the SEO sends a letter of compliance confirming that the senator meets the requirements of the Code and provides the senator with a copy of his or her public disclosure summary.
- Finally, once signed, a certified copy of each senator's public disclosure summary is placed by the SEO in the Public Registry and is made available for public inspection during normal business hours, pursuant to section 33 of the Code.
- 9. Senators have an ongoing obligation throughout the year to disclose changes to their circumstances, by filing the proper forms according to the procedures set out under the Code, in order to ensure that their confidential and public files contain accurate and up-to-date information at all times. Specifically, they are required to disclose the following:
  - (1) any material changes to the information provided in their confidential disclosure statements (subsection 28(4));
  - (2) any gifts or other benefits received as an expression of courtesy or protocol, or received within the customary standards of hospitality that usually accompany the senator's position where these exceed $500 in value, or any such gifts or other benefits received from one source in a one-year period where their total value exceeds $500 (section 17);
  - (3) any sponsored travel where the travel costs exceed $500, unless they are paid through the programs for international and interparliamentary affairs of the Parliament of Canada, by the Senate, the Government of Canada or the Senator's political party (section 18); and
  - (4) any private interest a senator or a family member may have in a matter that is before the Senate or a committee of the Senate in which the senator is a member.

10. Under section 20.7 of the Parliament of Canada Act, the Senate Ethics Officer is required to prepare an Annual Report within three months after the end of each fiscal year concerning the Office's activities for the year. This provides an opportunity to review the annual disclosure process for the year and highlight any issues in this regard that might be of interest to the Senate, but also to the public in general.

Advice and Opinions

Outside of the annual disclosure process, senators are encouraged to seek the advice of the SEO as often as possible, especially in cases of doubt, prior to taking action. The opinions or advice may be in writing under subsection 42(1) of the Code or of a more informal nature through telephone conversations, meetings and e-mail exchanges. The SEO is solely responsible for the interpretation and application of the Code as it relates to each senator's particular circumstances.

Informal advice is as important as the formal opinions in that it offers guidance and information to senators in order to help them to better understand the Code and how it applies in different circumstances. Every year the SEO provides hundreds of opinions and advice of varying degrees of complexity. The sheer volume of requests illustrates that senators are availing themselves of the advisory services that the office offers. Prevention, here as elsewhere, is preferable to cure.

INDEPENDENCE, ACCOUNTABILITY AND TRANSPARENCY OF THE SENATE ETHICS OFFICER*

In recent years, there has been renewed attention to longstanding independence and accountability concerns in relation to Officers of Parliament and Legislative Officers in Canada. Do they have too much independence or too little? Are they too close to the government? Do they provide enough accountability? In other words, are they "watchdogs or lapdogs"? Is the oversight they provide helpful to Parliament, or is that a role Parliament itself should fill? At the heart of these concerns lies the question: what is the benefit of Officers of Parliament and Legislative Officers to the functioning of Canadian democracy?

I bring to the discussion a practitioner's perspective, having served as the first Senate Ethics Officer over the last six years. My mandate is to administer, interpret and apply the Conflict of Interest Code for Senators.

The main responsibilities of the Senate Ethics Officer are to:

- Advise individual senators on a confidential and ongoing basis concerning their obligations under the Code and to assist them in remaining in compliance with the requirements of the Code;
- Oversee the ongoing annual disclosure process in which senators are required to disclose their financial and other interests;
- Conduct inquiries in order to determine whether a senator has complied with his or her obligations under the Code;
- Maintain a Public Registry containing information concerning the financial and other interests of senators that are required to be publicly disclosed under the Code; and
- Submit an annual report of the office's activities to the Speaker of the Senate for tabling in the Senate.

Independence

Parliamentary ethics commissioners in Canada, including the Senate Ethics Officer, must operate independently if they are to have credibility and retain the confidence of both the public and legislators when fulfilling their duties. This autonomy is essential in order to ensure that they are free to undertake investigations and provide considered advice to parliamentarians as they see fit, in a fully impartial and transparent manner without fear or favour, and perhaps more importantly, without the appearance of any outside influence or coercion. The independence of parliamentary ethics commissioners derives from such fundamentals as the legislation creating their office, the appointment process, the security of tenure, financial autonomy and reporting relationships.

The Senate Ethics Officer, as an example, serves as an independent Officer of the Senate. He reports directly to the Senate. His authority derives both from the Parliament of Canada Act and the Conflict of Interest Code for Senators. The interpretation and application of the Code as it relates to individual senators is his sole responsibility. He is appointed by the Governor in Council after consultation with the leader of every recognized party in the Senate, and following approval of the appointment by resolution of the Senate. This method of appointment ensures that the nominee has the broadest support in the Senate, irrespective of party affiliation. The Senate Ethics Officer is appointed for a renewable term of seven years and may be removed from office only for cause, by the Governor in Council, on address of the Senate.

The Parliament of Canada Act ensures that the Senate Ethics Officer has the control and management of the office independent of the Senate. For example, he is responsible for preparing estimates of the budget required to operate the office, which is separate and distinct from the estimates of the Senate as a whole. The estimates are submitted to the Speaker of the Senate who, after considering them, transmits them to the President of the Treasury Board. They are then laid before the House of Commons with the estimates of the government for the fiscal year. The Senate Ethics Officer is also protected by a statutory immunity.

Accountability and Transparency

Turning to accountability, parliamentary ethics commissioners are independent in some important respects but there are certain limits to their independence. Independence requires accountability. No parliamentary ethics commissioner can be totally independent in the sense that he does not have to report to anyone. Principles of responsible government require that he operates within a clear legal and operational framework. Good governance calls for commissioners to be accountable, particularly where they have been granted a high degree of independence. Accountability imposes a measure of discipline and requires transparency. The specific accountability and transparency arrangements and practices can take many forms and vary in different political and institutional environments.

Appointed on the recommendation of the Senate, the Senate Ethics Officer reports to the Senate for his actions. His office has multiple lines of accountability, including to the Senate as a whole, to the Speaker of the Senate, to standing committees of the Senate, and to the general public.

I answer to the Senate for the overall performance of the office.

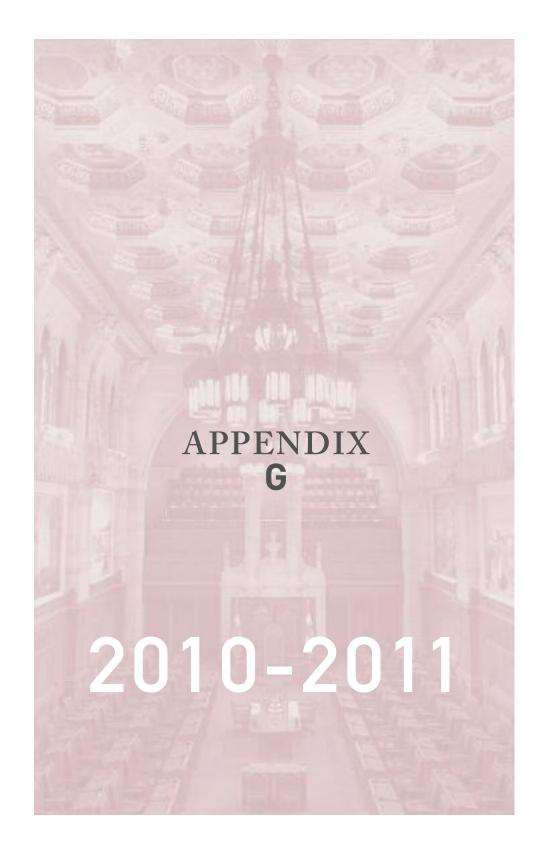

I am also accountable to the Standing Committee on Conflict of Interest for Senators for the efficiency and effectiveness of the activities of my office. I ordinarily appear two or three times a year before the Committee to discuss my annual report after it has been tabled in the Senate, as well as to review possible amendments to the Code.

I am accountable to the Senate for the financial operations of the office. As noted earlier, the Speaker of the Senate considers the estimates of the office. I may be called before the Standing Senate Committee on National Finance to answer questions about my proposed budget as part of the Committee's review of the Main estimates. The office's financial statements are also audited every year by an external auditor and the results are tabled in the Senate as part of my annual report. Specific information regarding my hospitality and travel expenses, as well as office contracts over $10,000, are posted on our Web site.

I also consider myself accountable to the public for providing clear, reliable and timely information about the Senate ethics regime. To this end, I submit an annual report on the office's activities to the Speaker of the Senate for tabling in the Senate. This report, as well as other relevant documents and links, are on a comprehensive and accessible Web site, which received some 6, 000 visits last year.

Conclusion

In conclusion, independence and accountability are important and complex relationships. They go together. They are two faces of the same coin. If one of the two faces is damaged, the whole coin is worthless. In my experience, to be effective and credible a parliamentary ethics commissioner must be independent; his independence, in turn, requires meaningful accountability and transparency. A commissioner without accountability may run rogue, while a commissioner without independence will lead to a lack of legitimacy. In both cases, this will result in a lack of confidence from both citizens and parliamentarians and undermine the commissioner's effectiveness. The right balance of independence and accountability allows Officers of Parliament and Legislative Officers to serve the best interests of both parliamentarians and the Canadian public by bolstering the degree of accountability, transparency and openness in our democratic system.
